Music night at The Brit Bar

RSVP Bhangra will be playing in Weston next week.

A band which once played at Glastonbury will be performing at a popular Weston town centre bar over the Easter holiday.

RSVP Bhangra have significant festival experience and will be showing their credentials at The Brit Bar.

They have played in front of big crowds at WOMAD and Boomtown in years gone by and their high-energy, interactive and fun show is sure to get a Weston crowd rocking too.

They bring a Punjabi Indian flavour to their performance, which is sure to be an addictive recipe.

It promises to be a great way to bring the four-day bank holiday weekend to a close.

RSVP Bhangra will take to the stage at 5pm on Monday at the High Street bar. Entry is free.

Shakespeare's Twelfth Night in Milton

A famous Shakespearean comedy will be retold by a Worle drama society.

The Worle Operatic and Drama Society (WODS) will be launching their 2019 season with Twelfth Night next month.

William Shakespeare's story of unrequited love, lost souls, mistaken identity, lust and laughter will amuse audiences at one of the town's smallest theatres.

WODS' talented members will take on the challenge of playing unforgettable characters including Sir Toby Belch, Malvolio and Feste as they head for the land of Illyria for.

The company are thrilled to be returning in 2019 with their second community project after the runaway success of last year's A Midsummer Nights Dream at the Tropicana's Theatre In The Bay.

They will be taking up residency in one of Weston's 'hidden gems', the Theatre In The Hut.

One cast member, Yvonne, said: "It has always been on my bucket list to do Shakespeare but I never thought it could be such fun.

The Worle Operatic and Drama Society will perform Twelfth Night at the Theatre In The Hut.
